Neediest Kids honors tech presidents J.D. Murphy and Dennis Yee with its annual Thomas B. Cookerly Humanitarian award

Bethesda, MD Sunday May 20, 2007 Neediest Kids, a McLean, Virginia-based nonprofit organization that provides assistance to disadvantaged youth in the Washington, D.C. area in collaboration with metropolitan Washington school systems, recognized Computech's president, J.D. Murphy, and Abacus Technology's president, Dennis Yee, with its annual Thomas B. Cookerly Humanitarian award. Neediest Kids provides children with the basics that they need to attend and succeed in school -- meals, transportation, eyeglasses, clothes, school supplies, etc. For more than 30 years, Neediest Kids has been making an immediate and lasting impact on the lives of thousands of D.C., Maryland, and Virginia students. Named for the founding Chairman of the Board of Neediest Kids, the Thomas B. Cookerly Humanitarian award honors Mr. Murphy and Mr. Yee for their continued generosity and concern for the welfare and quality of life of the public and parochial school children.
